MYERS-BRIGGS TYPE INDICATOR®

TYPE DESCRIPTION

Maximilian Von Hulewicz

Introversion | Sensing | Feeling | Perceiving

ISFPs have a great deal of warmth but may not show it until they know a person well. They enjoy the present moment and are often relaxed and easygoing. They are loyal and committed to their values and to those important to them. They are modest about their abilities, dislike disagreements and conflict, and do not force their values or opinions on others.

They value home, family, health, and financial security.

The logo for the ISFP personality type consists of the lowercase letters "isfp" in a white, lowercase, sans-serif font, centered within a blue diamond shape.

Characteristics of ISFPs

- ISFPs try to take time to enjoy the people and the world around them.
- They are attuned to the sensory details in their environment.
- ISFPs find quiet satisfaction in simple pleasures.
- They learn more by doing than by reading.
- Their easygoing nature often hides their deep values and commitments.

ISFPs with Others

- ISFPs care deeply about people but may show it more through acts of kindness than through words.
- They are loyal and committed to people important to them.
- They are faithful in fulfilling obligations to others.
- ISFPs are attuned to the feelings and needs of others and flexible in responding to them.
- They tend to be quiet and unassuming, and so may underrate themselves and be underestimated by others.
- Their warmth, enthusiasm, and playful humor may not be apparent to people who don't know them well.
- They have little wish to dominate or control in interpersonal situations.

ISFPs at Work

- ISFPs want to have a purpose beyond their paycheck. They want to contribute to people's well-being or happiness and will work with energy and dedication when doing something they believe in.
- They are perfectionists when they care deeply about something, and are particularly suited for work that requires both devotion and adaptability.
- They like to have their own space and to work within their own time frame.
- They often excel in craftsmanship, and their handiwork is usually more eloquent than their words.
- Many ISFPs have a special love of nature and a sympathy with animals.
- They are apt to enjoy fields in which taste, discrimination, and a sense of beauty and proportion are important.
- They tend to gravitate toward work that allows them to contribute to human understanding, happiness, or health, such as positions in teaching and healthcare.
- They don't like jobs that require an analytical, impersonal approach to people.

Potential Blind Spots for ISFPs

- If ISFPs have not developed their Feeling preference, they may not take the time to go inside and consider their values and therefore may make decisions they later regret.
- Or, they may avoid making decisions altogether, allowing others or circumstances to decide for them.
- If they have not developed their Sensing preference, ISFPs may have no reliable way of getting accurate data about the external world, and their decisions will then be overly personal.
- ISFPs may feel such a contrast between their ideals and their accomplishments that they burden themselves with a sense of inadequacy. This can be true even when they are being just as effective as others.
- The most modest of all the types, ISFPs tend to underrate and understate themselves and may take for granted anything they do well. They may then become overly sensitive and vulnerable, with dwindling confidence in themselves.
